

Aaron's Cycling Team

Shannon Hutchison continued the Aaron's Cycling Team winning streak in the Georgia Cup series this weekend with a convincing win at the Rome Criterium. Shannon was assisted by teammate Julie Granger who kept the pace high on the difficult circuit, which contained a monster hill and a race time temperature close to 100 degrees. For the finishing stretch it was an all too familiar site for her competitors, as Shannon stepped on the throttle and sprinted away for the win. Julie managed to sprint for 5th behind her. This race served as a final tune up for Shannon, as she prepares to take on some of the top cyclists in the world at the upcoming Bank of America Criterium in Charlotte, NC on August 6 and the National Championship on August 21 in Chicago.

Note: Shannon is wearing the Georgia Cup Most Aggressive Rider Jersey in these pictures. She now has a dominating lead in this event and has likely locked up the jersey for the season.

Perry-Roubaix Omnium

The Aaron's Cycling Team continued its winning streak during the recent Perry-Roubaix Omnium in Perry, GA. Only nine team members made the trip to what is known as one of the most physically demanding races around due to the fact that the course makes its way through four miles of dirt road each lap. Amazingly, out of only these nine racers, the team racked up an omnium win, a road race win, and twelve top ten finishes!

The highlights of the weekend included Robbie Kollar's win the Elite men's omnium and Daniel Karnis' win in the road race. The girls team hung despite some bad weather to secure seven of the top ten results.
